Jordan Meunier, environmental safety specialist for London's Labatt brewery leans on a bin holding hundreds of defective beer bottles. The province's largest Labatt factory recycled more than 98 per cent of all waste and byproducts used in the production of its beer, including 7,330 tonnes of cardboard in 2011, while maintaining above-average health standards. The brewery hosted a media event on Tuesday to coincide with World Environment Day.

Labatt makes U-turn after Blue backlash

Power of social media. Brewer objects to photo of alleged killer with a Blue and is roundly mocked in the Twitterverse

JOHN MATISZ
john.matisz@metronews.ca

In less than 24 hours, Labatt Brewing Company threatened to sue one of the country's largest newspapers, was the object of mockery in the online community, then opted to drop the legal action.

A photo of suspected murderer Luka Rocco Magnotta holding a Labatt Blue beer bottle was posted on the Montreal Gazette's website on Sunday.

Executives at Labatt — which was founded in London in 1847 and still employs about 500 locals — believed the photo was in such bad taste that they threatened to sue. But by Tuesday afternoon they had changed their minds.

Reaction

- Wendy Smith, president of the Red Rhino marketing firm in London, believes the situation in fact works in Labatt's favour.
- "Honestly, they're probably loving it," Smith said before Labatt backed down from its lawsuit threat. "It's not something they (posted themselves) ... so it's great for the Blue brand."
- Labatt general manager Jake Fenn and other employees at the Simcoe Street plant declined to comment on the Magnotta situation.

"Once the Gazette explained their position, we promptly thanked them for their response, dropped the matter and we will not be following up further," Charlie Angelakos, Labatt vice-president of corporate affairs, said in a statement.

Gazette lawyer Mark Bantey said the daily had no intention of replacing or removing the Magnotta photo. It was retrieved from Facebook and is "newsworthy," he said.

When word spread on the Internet about Labatt's threat of legal action, the meme "#newlabattcampaign" took off on Twitter.

Hundreds of posts appeared alongside the hashtag. Most mocked Labatt's position with morbid corporate slogan suggestions.

For hours, the meme trended across Canada, with virtually every major news outlet in the country picking up the story.

The controversy occurred the same day Labatt in London hosted an event to celebrate its excellence in waste reduction. The London plant recycles 98 per cent of materials used in the production of Labatt beer. WITH FILES FROM TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Councillors talk development, buses at meeting

City politicians took no action Tuesday on a written report about successes born from Kitchener's economic-development investment fund.

The document, tabled during an investment and economic prosperity committee meeting, will be used as background information when developing a funding formula for the city's prosperity plan, due out this fall, officials said.

Also on Tuesday, councillors asked city staff to research how changes to provincial regulations would affect intercity bus service.

Coach Canada and Pacific Western were at the meeting to ask for city support of proposed changes the companies say would let them enter the market.

Province backs 'gay' clubs for students

Use of language.
Anti-bullying legislation passed despite opposition from Catholics, Conservatives

ANGELA MULLINS
angela.mullins@metronews.ca

The head of London's Catholic school board made one more attempt Tuesday to set the record straight when it comes to trustees' stance on gay-straight alliances.

District officials aren't opposed to offering support for gay students who might be bullied, Phil Squire, board chair said.

What they don't like, is "labelling" groups with words like "gay," or, for that matter, "straight," Squire said.

"I don't think it's a good move for any school. I believe in protecting any person from bullying. We don't believe any person is of any less value than any other person."

Squire made the comments hours after anti-bullying legislation passed in Queen's Park. The most controversial part of the law strips school boards — public and Catholic — of their ability to veto student clubs identified as gay-straight alliances. Catholic church leaders have complained the legislation, backed by Liberals and the NDP, will force them to accept student clubs that go against their faith.

Squire said his board had hoped to form clubs called "Respecting Differences," so no one group was singled out.

That would have been allowed under the legislation's first draft. Requiring schools to OK gay-straight alliances was an amendment pushed by the NDP.

The school board will "do the best job we can with what we have to work with it," Squire said. "We'll deal with it as we deal with all kinds of stuff the government brings down."

Squire said he's aware of no active — or requests for — gay-straight alliances to start in the district.

The Thames Valley School District has such alliances in most secondary schools.

District officials say:

- Since 2007, the Thames Valley District School Board has organized an annual conference during which students and teachers develop action plans to promote awareness and create "safe spaces" in school for LGBT youths.

Right-wingers testify for Breivik

The 33-year-old self-styled anti-Muslim crusader has placed importance on this line of argument, fearing that his ideology could be undermined if he is declared insane.

Breivik, who is on trial for killing 77 people in a rampage in Oslo last July, has confessed to the attacks but denies criminal guilt. He claims that he acted in self-defence because his victims had betrayed their country by embracing immigration.

Defence lawyers attempted to show others who share Breivik's worldviews are not declared mentally ill for doing so.

Magnotta won't fight extradition

Alleged killer Luka Rocco Magnotta told a judge Tuesday he will not fight his extradition from Germany to Canada.

Magnotta is currently wanted in Canada on several charges — including first-degree murder — in connection with the gruesome Montreal killing and dismemberment of Chinese national Jun Lin.

Police in Montreal, meanwhile, are still looking for several of Lin's body parts.

Berlin police spokesman Stefan Redlich told The Canadian Press that Magnotta met with a German judge at police headquarters, where he was held in a 1.5-metre-by-five-metre cell overnight.

"(Magnotta) did not say anything about the case itself, but (when) asked about whether he would object to go back to Canada, he said no he wouldn't," Redlich said in a phone interview.

Magnotta will have to go before a German court for an extradition hearing once Canada formally requests he return for trial. That means Magnotta could be back in Canada as early as this week, according to authorities.

"This may speed up the (extradition) process, but on the other hand, he may change his opinion any day," Redlich said.

"So we will see."

Magnotta was arrested Monday at a Berlin Internet cafe following an international manhunt. He fled Montreal for Europe after Lin's death sometime overnight between May 24 and May 25.

The 33-year-old Lin's torso was found last week stuffed in a suitcase in an alley behind the west-end Montreal apartment building where Magnotta lived.

A hand and a foot were mailed in separate parcels to the offices of two different political parties in Ottawa.

Biting spiders cause panic in rural India

Large biting spiders have sparked panic in remote northeast India, but health authorities fear primitive treatment of the bites' painful swelling may be more dangerous than the spiders themselves.

Two people died in Tinsukia district after witch doctors used razor blades to drain the wounds. It's not known if the victims died from spider poison or from the attempted treatment. The victims were cremated before autopsies could be done.

Another seven bite victims have been treated with antibiotics against infection after they also tried themselves to drain their wounds, said Dr. Anil Phapowali at the local Sadiya town hospital.

Officials cannot use antivenom in treating bite victims until the species is identified.

The spiders appear to be a newly discovered species of tarantula. WASBIR HUSSEIN/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Vancouver Police say packages containing a foot and a hand were delivered to two area schools Tuesday afternoon. Police say a human hand was discovered in a package opened at False Creek School, and later, a human foot was found by staff at St. George's School, a private boys school. One of Lin's hands, a foot and his head are still missing.

Canada's richest aren't all bankers and brokers: Study

Top one per cent.
Only a small portion of the country's highest salary earners work in finance, despite being the target of Occupy protesters

To be considered in Canada's richest one per cent, you need to make at least $230,000 a year. You're most likely male, have a university degree and work longer than average hours.

But you're not necessarily a banker or Bay Street investment broker — the primary targets of the Occupy protest movement — a new study by a group of economists at the University of British Columbia found.

But only 10 per cent of Canada's richest work in the financial industry, the study found.

CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS

- Earnings: $452,887/year
- Gender: 82.7 per cent male
- Work: 50+ hours/week
- Age: 35 to 64 years
- Occupation: Senior management, doctors, dentists, vets, finance professionals

The rest are doctors, dentists, vets and corporate managers.

"In the eyes of many, the culprits are to be found at the very place where the Occupy movement started: on Wall Street, or our own Bay Street," the study said. "'But there are just not enough investment bankers and high-flying stock brokers to fill the ranks of the 275,000 individuals in the top one per cent."

The top one per cent of Canadians now controls 14 per cent of total income, the paper found, noting that they enjoyed just eight per cent in the 1970s.

"Such an uneven distribution of income has not been seen since the dark days of the Great Depression when it reached an all-time high of 18 per cent," the paper notes.

It found that despite impressive wage gains made by women over the past few decades, the top one per cent of income earners is overwhelmingly (82.5 per cent) male. On average, they earn $450,000 a year versus $36,000 for the other 99 per cent.

THE FETCHING WAYS OF CLEO THE RETRIEVER

JUST SAYIN'
Paul Sullivan
metronews.ca/justsaying

It has been five years almost to the day that we had to put down our golden retriever, Cleo. She had cancer.

The night before she died, we decided to have a Cleofest.

We did all her favourite things. We went down to the creek at the end of the street. When we were both younger dogs, we would run the trails along the creek, stopping on the way to play the Stupid Rock Game.

Cleo was a retriever, but as time went on she increasingly relied on symbolic fetching. In The Stupid Rock Game: I threw a stone in the water; Cleo nodded half-heartedly in the direction of the stone; repeat ad nauseam. She could play the game all day, as I had to do all the throwing. After a while I'd get tired of the Stupid Rock Game, and start to walk away. That would be her cue to plunge her head into the water, stay under for an alarming period of time, and then emerge, triumphant, with a giant rock in her jaws, which she would dump at my feet, a symbol for all the little rocks she refused to retrieve.

The Stupid Rock Game

"I threw a stone in the water; Cleo nodded half-heartedly in the direction of the stone; repeat ad nauseam. She could play the game all day, as I had to do all the throwing."

On her last night, she came up with one mighty fine rock.

On the way back home, she managed to find something smelly to roll in — bonus — and when we got home, my daughter got out the whipped cream in a spray can and gave her a mighty dose. If all dogs go to heaven, she was there a night early.

I don't know about your dog, but Cleo was The Best Dog Ever. She had the knack of making everyone around her feel as if you were the one she loved best. Some dogs are one-person dogs; others are members of a family pack; Cleo was a world dog, the Chevy Cruze of dogs. She even loved postal delivery people.

She wasn't fussy; she even liked me. I'd be trying to read, ignoring the dog, even as she went through her entire repertoire of attractive dog tricks: Baleful-puppy-stare-great-thumping-tail-roll-over-shake-a-paw-woof-impatiently. And when none of that worked, she stuck her nose under my free hand and petted herself. Resourceful dog.

She even liked going to the vet. And this last time, she must have thought: This is great. The guy gets to pat my head while they give me this needle.

Or maybe she knew. She knew everything else worth knowing.

She died with her head in my hands.

Now and then, someone comes into your life and then is gone again.

But not before she leaves muddy footprints all over your heart…

Weird news

Turkey break-in ruffles feathers

A LaSalle, Ont., resident arrived home Saturday evening to a smashed window, a mess in his living room and an unexpected feathery intruder waiting on his couch.

The break-and-enter was the doing of a giant turkey, which also left "poop" and "a blood spot the size of a 50-cent piece" in their living room.

Ken Stroud, 70, who had been out with his wife that day, was the first to spot the 18-inch hole in their window. He initially thought someone had thrown a rock into their house, and walked unsuspectingly into his dark living room — until he saw something move.

"It's a wild turkey and it's sitting on the arm of my chesterfield," said Stroud about his calm 25-pound intruder. "He was sitting there as if he lived there.

"The wife was hysterical," said Stroud who guarded his wife Mary while she made her way into one of the rooms.

Stroud says the humane society captured the bird quickly, with just a net and blanket. They've been told the bird is doing well and will be released back into the wild. PHOEBE HO/METRO

Michael Fassbender plays David 8, a synthetic human automaton ancestor of Alien's Ash, in the upcoming film Prometheus. HANDOUT

Prometheus, a prequel or not a prequel to Alien?

Space opera. Screenwriters call Ridley Scott's newest film 'an Alien/Blade Runner mash-up'

IN FOCUS
Richard Crouse
scene@metronews.ca

Prometheus, a prequel, or not a prequel? That is the question.

It's a query many have made about the new Ridley Scott space opera. The trailer looks and feels like a chronological cousin to his 1979 classic sci-fi horror epic Alien but the director denies it is a prequel.

Here's what we know. When Scott sat down to write Prometheus (with screenwriters Jon Spaihts and Damon Lindelof, who calls it "an Alien/Blade Runner mash-up") he had a prequel in mind featuring Xenomorphs, the acid-tongued space baddies who gave the first movie its name, and the giant dead alien nicknamed Space Jockey. But then he veered off into something larger; mankind's origin story.

"Out of the creative process emerged a new, grand mythology," he said. "The keen fan will recognize strands of Alien's DNA ... but the ideas tackled in this film are unique, far-reaching and provocative."

Still, Prometheus, which is set in the same universe as Alien, seems to provide the backstory which points forward to the original film.

Firstly, Prometheus is set in 2085, 37 years before the Weyland-Yutani Corporation (which also appears in Prometheus, simply as The Weyland Corporation) sent the commercial towing spaceship Nostromo on its fateful trip from Thedus to Earth in Alien.

Next, while the Xenomorphs may not appear in the acid-spitting form we're used to — "The sequels squeezed him dry," Scott says, "no way am I going back there" — they aren't completely absent. Artist H.R. Giger, who created the beasts in the first film, was brought back to "reverse-engineer the design of the Aliens in the film" to create a Xenomorph forbearer.

Also, Michael Fassbender plays David 8, a synthetic human automaton ancestor of Alien's Ash.

Further evidence came in a trailer that shows star Noomi Rapace standing in front of two unworn Space Jockey suits, suits which will soon be donned, perhaps, by the hapless space jockey seen in Alien.

Finally Scott promises a scene to equal the horror of Alien's "chest-burster" mind-blower, in which an alien parasite exploded out of John Hurt's torso. It's an iconic moment that no prequel could be without, right?

"There is a scene that could be called the equivalent of that in this film," Scott admits.

Even though the prequel debate rages on, the one thing nobody is questioning is how exciting it is to have Ridley Scott back in the sci-fi genre after a 33-year gap.

Kendra's right where she wants to be

MARY ANN GEORGANTOPOULOS
Metro World News in New York City

Fun-loving Kendra Wilkinson-Baskett, who captured fans' hearts on Girls Next Door and Kendra, is back — sans the drama.

The former Playboy model returns to the small screen with her new reality show, Kendra on Top, which premiered this week on WE tv in the U.S.

"This new season is completely different from my previous shows," says Wilkinson-Baskett. "Kendra on Top feels like a lighter and happier show. We're finally where we want to be."

Wilkinson-Baskett and her family — husband and former NFL athlete Hank Baskett III, plus son Hank IV — faced some struggles during her last reality show on E!

"There was a gray cloud hovering over me," she says of Kendra. But she's found her party-girl groove again now that she and her family have a home.

"We're stable and we're settled with an amazing two-year-old son. We have balance," she says.

Don't worry: Wilkinson-Baskett didn't forget the fact that her fans fell in love with her outrageous personality.

Changing course

"Moving around for my husband's career was hard. I couldn't be happy; I was miserable."
Kendra Wilkinson-Baskett

"I always kept in mind what people think of me," she says. "I'm bubbly and outspoken, and for a while I lost that. I was a victim of my husband's career. I'm back to being myself."

So what got the star out of her darkness? Patience, she says. "You can't give up. You have to know that there's a light at the end of the tunnel. Change is hard, but you have to play the game," she adds.

Expanding the family?

Wilkinson-Baskett says she and her husband have begun discussing having another child. "There are no plans yet, but in a couple of months, why not?" she says. "Hank wants baby No. 2 more than I do."

As for Little Hank?

He's so good with other kids, "it's almost like he's asking for a brother or sister," she says.

For the sci-fi fan

Fly through the stars at Space Mountain. For nearly three minutes, the rollercoaster hurtles, corkscrews and twists its way through the indoor track, lit only by the stars as you soar through the darkness of space. Built in 1977, this timeless coaster is a cornerstone of Disneyland's futuristic — and kitschy — Tomorrowland. A stone's throw from Space Mountain is Star Tours: The Adventures Continue, a technological world away from Space Mountain. This 3D ride, guided by C-3PO, allows you to be a space tourist.

For the wannabe sailor

One of the park's oldest attractions, the Jungle Cruise in Adventureland, takes you on a boat tour of a reptile-filled river. The cruise is led by a Disney cast member, who provides commentary as your steamer passes by animatronic elephants, snakes and monkeys. Pirates of the Caribbean, another original attraction, got an update just as the hit films came out. This ride features appearances by Captain Jack Sparrow and other characters you'll recognize from the movie.

For the film enthusiast

Now referred to as a "tribute" to Michael Jackson, Captain EO is still being screened at Disneyland. The 3D film was directed by Francis Ford Coppola and features Jackson using song and dance to transform the evil Supreme Leader into a beautiful woman — played by Angelica Houston.

Located near the entrance of California Adventure, Soarin' Over California takes its audience on a high-flying tour of the state — from the coast to the mountains. A cantilever lifts the seated audience into the air and into a concaved video screen that makes you feel like you are flying high above some of the state's best-known features.

For the happily spooked

It's not very scary, but the Haunted Mansion can still attract a crowd. Sitting in Doom Buggies, you are taken on a tour of the mansion and introduced to some of the scary spectres that call the old plantation house home.

For a modern scare, It's Tough to be a Bug gives you an up-close look at the creepy, crawly characters that live all around us. Not only is the show in 3D thanks to the Bug Eyes provided, but it also features stinky smells, spraying water, and seats wired to give you a creepy-crawling feeling that the bugs are too close for comfort.

For the kid at heart

No trip to Disneyland is complete without a visit to it's a Small World — the much lauded animatronics-filled boat ride through the cultures of the world. Warning: You will have the song stuck on continuing loop for the remainder of your trip.

For a modern small world, visit Toy Story Midway Mania. The 4D ride features spinning vehicles that take you from one screen to another. At each stop you try to hit Toy Story-related targets that pop up on the screens.

Travel in brief

App to keep travellers healthy

A new app might prove useful to Canadians heading out on a road trip this summer and seeking timely health-related information along the way. The free app for Apple devices offers up-to-date details on public health and environmental advisories across the country, says its developer Health & Safety Watch Inc. "Everything can change very rapidly — for example a destination that had safe drinking water when you left on your road trip may actually be under a boil water advisory by the time you arrive," says Jeff Aramini, company president and a former Health Canada senior public health epidemiologist.

You've broiled it, you've deep fried it, but have you tried roasting it lately?

Ingredients

Of course this recipe also works for a weeknight dinner. The chicken comes out terrifically moist and tender. And because the chicken is flattened before it is cooked, it is finished much faster than traditional roasting methods.

Here's what you'll need:

- 4-pound whole chicken
- 1 tablespoon kosher salt
- 1 tablespoon garlic powder
- 1/2 tablespoon dried thyme
- 1/2 tablespoon ground black pepper
- Prep time from start to finish. 50 minutes (10 minutes active).
- Servings. 8.

My recipe for a romantic picnic? A roasted chicken with sandwich trimmings.

Roll with me on this one. It's easy and totally appropriate.

You start out by following my couldn't-be-easier recipe for cast-iron skillet roasted whole chicken. The gist is that you split the bird at the backbone (technically called spatchcocking, but that just seems inappropriate in this context), sear it breast side down on the stovetop, then flip the bird and finish it in the oven.

When the chicken is cooked, you let it cool, then you cover it and refrigerate it right from the pan. You even can do the roasting the night before.

Instructions:

1. Heat the oven to 425 F.

2. Place the chicken on the cutting board breast side down. Use sturdy kitchen shears to cut down the length of the spine on both sides. Discard the spine. Turn the bird breast side up. Gripping the 2 cut sides where the spine used to be, open up the bird, pressing down firmly at the centre to flatten it.

3. In a small bowl, mix together the salt, garlic powder, thyme and pepper. Rub the mixture evenly over the entire chicken.

4. Set a large cast-iron skillet on a burner over medium-high. When the skillet it hot, add the chicken breast side down. Let the chicken brown for 5 minutes, then use tongs to carefully flip the bird so the breast side is up. Set the skillet in the oven and roast for 30 to 40 minutes, or until the thickest part reaches 165 F.

5. Remove the chicken from the oven. Either serve immediately or let cool and refrigerate for use in a picnic as described above.

Cocktail of the Week

Fresh and fruity almond smoothie

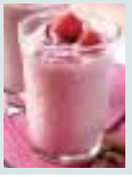
Let this crisp and fruity drink give you a smart morning start, or drink it as an afternoon snack to keep hunger at bay.

Robust Raspberry Almond Smoothie
(Makes 6 servings)

Ingredients:
2 cups almond milk
1, 12-oz package frozen raspberries
2 medium bananas, cut into chunks
2-3 tbsp honey
½ tsp almond extract
3 tbsp almond butter
½ cup vanilla soy ice cream
12 fresh raspberries (optional)

Directions:
Combine all ingredients in a blender; whirl until smooth. Pour into 6 glasses and garnish with fresh raspberries if desired.

ALMOND BOARD OF CALIFORNIA



Picnic pleasure. Bruschetta couscous salad ideal for summer afternoons

Finally, bruschetta made portable. MATTHEW MEAD/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ingredients

Start to finish: 30 minutes

- 16 ounces Israeli couscous
- 1/2 small red onion, finely diced
- 3 cloves of garlic, minced
- 3 ribs celery, finely diced
- 20 ounces cocktail tomatoes, quartered
- 1/2 cup fresh basil leaves, torn
- 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
- 1 cup small fresh mozzarella balls
- 1/4 cup extra-virgin olive oil
- 2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
- Salt and ground black pepper

Perfect for a picnic, Israeli-style couscous actually is made from small balls of pasta. If you can't find it, feel free to substitute another small pasta.

1. Cook the couscous according to package directions. Allow to cool. In a large bowl, combine the cooled couscous with the red onion, garlic, celery, tomatoes, basil, Parmesan, mozzarella, olive oil and vinegar. Stir to combine, then season with salt and black pepper.

2. The salad can be served immediately, but the flavours improve if it is allowed to sit for 30 minutes. Serves 10.

Parents, I'm not getting paid

Labour sans the loonies. It's not exactly what you want for Junior right now, but let's weigh the benefits

LEAH RUEHLICKE

The interview you have with your child about their internship may be just important as the one they'll secure because of the unpaid role. ISTOCK

Your child just found their dream internship and your nightmare of a compensation guarantee: unpaid. But unpaid internships, although daunting at first, can be an extremely beneficial (and integral) step in your child's career path.

Stephanie Reid, an executive assistant at BlueCat Networks and mother of two unpaid interns, once had her own hesitations about the working-for-free lifestyle. However, as her two children gained invaluable work experience and turned their internships into success stories, she realized the value of the unpaid internship.

"It's not the same if an intern is doing solitary photocopying all day and thus not learning anything or meeting people," she says. Luckily both of her children interned at organizations related to their own career aspirations.

"I know we are very lucky to be able to do this," Reid says. "If I knew what I know now, I would have suggested to my kids and all of their friends that they start putting money aside for an opportunity like this as soon as they enter high school, even."

Reid offers the following tips and advice to fellow parents struggling with the idea of their child embarking upon an unpaid position:

• Evaluate the internship. Internships are beneficial only if your child is learning career-related skills, making industry connections and utilizing the education they have.

• Internships can show your child what they actually want to do. "After hearing about how many kids change course, I guess the main thing I was hoping for was confirmation that they were on the right track at school — or not — and getting the chance to fix that quickly," Reid adds.

• Set a timeline. Agree with your child that you'll re-evaluate how things are going in four months, for example, to ensure that they are benefitting from their internship and, if they aren't, to begin exploring new paths.

• Encourage your child to secure extra hours at their paid, part-time jobs in order to compensate for the money they aren't making while interning.

• Accept that things take time. Reid's son found his three-month internship extended for another three months and, after discussing the difficulties of continuing down the unpaid path, both realized that three months isn't necessarily long enough to prove yourself to an employer.

Michel Therrien, who said he believes he will be a better, wiser coach than he was in his first stint behind the Montreal Canadiens bench. New general manager Marc Bergevin named Therrien as head coach on Tuesday. Therrien took over behind the Habs bench during the 2000-01 season and left midway through the 2002-03. Since then, Therrien has coached in the AHL, reached a Stanley Cup final with the Pittsburgh Penguins, done pro scouting and, most recently, worked as a Canadiens' television analyst.

Euro money stacks up to World Cup's

The European Championship begins Friday boasting the numbers to back its reputation as one of world sports' elite events. UEFA will earn commercial revenues of at least $1.6 billion for the 16-team tournament in Poland and Ukraine, rivaling FIFA's 32-nation World Cup for average match value. With each match expected to draw an average television audience of 150 million fans worldwide, Euro 2012 will bring a near-daily diet of ratings bigger than the Super Bowl.

NHL. Quick likely to run away with Conn Smythe trophy after historic post-season for Kings

Kings defenceman Willie Mitchell congratulates goalie Jonathan Quick after Game 3 on Monday in Los Angeles. HARRY HOW/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Jonathan Quick has set the bar so high for himself, his Los Angeles Kings teammates can barely see it.

"He's playing on another planet," forward Jarret Stoll said Tuesday. "That's what he expects."

The 26-year-old American has put together a post-season that is taking on historical proportions. As the Kings entered Wednesday's Game 4 against New Jersey with a chance to win the Stanley Cup, Quick sat poised to post some of the best playoff statistics in NHL history.

In the process, he's completely eliminated any debate there might be about who deserves to take home the Conn Smythe Trophy as playoff MVP.

"In these playoffs, every game he's been on," said Hockey Hall of Famer Luc Robitaille, the Kings' president of business operations. "He's been very, very special."

The Devils have been unable to find a way to solve him. As one-sided as the Stanley Cup final seems right now, it likely wouldn't have looked that way if not for the performance of Quick.

He's been particularly sharp early in games during this series, giving the Kings a chance to get more comfortable while planting seeds of doubt in the minds of Devils players.

"We're creating as many chances this round as we had against the Rangers the prior round — we're not finishing," said Devils coach Pete DeBoer. "He's played very well.... We've never been able to grab momentum, (score the) first goal, at a critical time."

Added veteran Devils goalie Martin Brodeur: "We've got to find ways to score."

Quick has been a cornerstone for the Kings for three seasons, but this is the first one where he's commanded national attention. A little shy and short with answers, he comes across as someone who wouldn't mind getting his anonymity back.

But that's unlikely now that he has a chance to match Tim Thomas' trophy haul of a year ago by winning the Stanley Cup, Conn Smythe and the Vezina Trophy as the NHL's top goalie. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cup captains show further growth in U.S.

It has happened only once in NHL history, but it will definitely happen again: An American captain will hoist the Stanley Cup.

Whether it's the Kings' Dustin Brown, of Ithica, N.Y., or Zach Parise of Minneapolis doing it in the event of a New Jersey comeback, it's a sign of the rise of American hockey.

"It's one more statement about the particular development of our sport and our program in America," said Dave Ogrean, executive director of USA Hockey.

Parise and Brown were both 14 years old when Derian Hatcher, of Sterling Heights, Mich., led the Dallas Stars to the Stanley Cup over the Buffalo Sabres in 1999.

Engines

On the powertrain front, the Mustang V6 and Boss 302 ratings are unchanged at 305 and 444 horsepower, respectively. However the V8-powered GT now makes 420 horsepower, up eight. In addition, the six-speed manual-transmission cars now have "hill start assist" that prevents the vehicle from rolling backward on an incline.

2013 Mustangs receive a new hood and a larger grille.

Interior

The interior remains a familiar spot, unless you select the newly optional cloth or leather-covered Recaro-brand sport-seat option that provides significant support when cornering. Also available is a Track Apps dashboard information screen that shows cornering g-forces, acceleration times and braking intervals.

2013 Ford Mustang

- Type. Two-door, rear-wheel-drive sport coupe/convertible.
- Engines (hp): 3.7-litre DOHC V6 (305); 5.0-litre DOHC V8 (420/444); 5.8-litre DOHC V8, supercharged (662).
- Base Price (incl. destination): $25,500.

Wide price range

Naturally, Mustangs feature something for every budget, beginning at $25,500 for the base V6 coupe and $32,500 for the convertible, ranging all the way up to $63,200 for the Shelby GT 500 coupe ($68,200 for the soft top).

Review. Ford pokes and prods its pony to perfection

MALCOLM GUNN
Wheelbase Media

During the 1950s and early 1960s, there were dramatic year-over-year changes in North American automobile design. Back then it was referred to as "planned obsolescence." Now, more than 50 years later, Ford has seemingly revived this pattern with the Mustang.

The rapidity of renewal with the original ponycar is understandable … sort of. Without question, General Motors' Chevrolet division has painted a giant bulls eye on the Mustang's hindquarters and is taking direct aim by drawing the latest Camaro from its quiver. It's a game of automotive one-upmanship that shows no signs of abating.

The Camaro has been a burr in the Mustang's saddle ever since the latest edition arrived for the 2010 model year. As it stands now, the Camaro holds a slight sales lead and has recently bolstered its position with the Corvette-powered 580-horsepower ZL1 model.

The response from Ford is predictable and formidable. As of right now you can order a 2013 Mustang-based Shelby GT500 with a cranium-snapping 662 horsepower. The extra 112-horse punch is delivered by a new supercharged 5.8-litre V8 that replaces the previous 550-horsepower 5.4-litre thoroughbred. Carroll Shelby, who died May 11 at age 89, has his name on the most powerful production Mustang of all time.

In fact, the non-partisan Society of Automotive Engineers determined that the new GT500 has the world's most potent production-spec V8, giving Ford significant bragging rights while it awaits Chevy's response. Where it will eventually wind up is anyone's guess, but for now enthusiasts from Comox to Come By Chance are predictably in awe of the power parade.

Dents be gone

Fixing minor dings, chips or holes in your vehicle doesn't have to be a hugely expensive affair where buying even minimum quantities of everything you need would still be wasting a bunch of money. The Bondo Small Dent Repair Kit comes with all the necessary items to help give a professional finish to your bodywork. Each kit comes with six ounces of lightweight body filler, glaze, a spreader, a mixer, and one sheet each of 80, 180 and 320-grit sandpaper that you progressively use to make the repair smoother. Admittedly the process is not for the faint of heart, but once the job is completed, you're ready to prime and paint. You can purchase this product at many department or automotive-specialty stores, or from a number of online sites such as amazon.com for $15-$18 US. You can also check out the complete line of 3M/Bondo car care products at 3Mcarcare.com.

Horoscope

Aries | March 21 - April 20. According to the planets you have been taking it easy and doing just enough to get by, but that must now change.

Taurus | April 21 - May 21. You may think you are a law unto yourself but even a Taurus has to toe the line occasionally and if you are smart you will tone down your act a bit over the next few days.

Gemini | May 22 - June 20. You will be pleasantly surprised how helpful people are today.

Cancer | June 21 - July 22. You may have some serious issues to deal with but that does not mean you cannot have fun.

Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Avoid petty arguments and focus your energy on things that really matter.

Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. This will be one of those days when no matter how hard you try to get your head around what's going on you just can't make the connection.

Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. You need to be more adventurous. That applies to all areas of your life but especially to your work where you could miss out on a golden opportunity if you are afraid to take a risk.

Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. Try not to be so judgmental today. Remember that people are supposed to be different. Make an effort to get along with someone you would not usually want to hang out with.

Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21. You have serious duties to perform but you must also make time for the lighter side of life.

Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan 20. Things are rarely as bad as they seem, so throw yourself into a task you enjoy and before you know it you will have forgotten all about . . . well, whatever it was you were getting worked up about.

Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb 18. You can sense that so much is possible. But don't get carried away, especially where romance is concerned. Head and heart must be balanced.

Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20. Whatever good ideas you have today you are advised to do something with them quickly, because later in the week you may not have time to do them justice.
